The whole trouble, said Mr. Wilson, was due to the "dead ends" in the city. These are being blown out as rapidly as porsible. The water-shed is in good condition, he said, and no apprehension should be felt about the water. Chemist Martin stated that there was only a slight trace of nitrates in the water, not enough to talk about. Mr. Wilson did not believe that the present condition of the Croton water had anything to do with increasing the death rate.

In order to overcome this difficulty arrangements have been made by which certain banks have supplied currency in exchange for loan certificates. The Fourth National, the Gallatin, the Chase and the Corn Exchange have been the principal factors in supplying the funds required.

The Clearnis-House Committee meets this afternoon to devise means for increasing the proportion of cash to be furnished by the different banks in settlement.

The nature of the plan proposed is to place such restrictions on the use of certificates as will prevent there being so large a monopoly of payments as there have been of late.
